The United States' looming departure from UNESCO has the best of us clenching our fists. But instead of stamping our feet, there's all the more reason to put one foot in front of the other and travel to international horizons that honor their heritage cities, sites, and natural wonders. Offering sensational, unobstructed views of the world's celebrated landmarks, here are the best UNESCO-adjacent hotels on the planet:

Pitons Management Area

St. Lucia's inspiring Pitons—twin volcanic mountains jutting from the Caribbean Sea—are like bookends to Sugar Beach, a Viceroy Resort. The property nestles between the iconic landmarks along a coveted bay (a slice of which you can own—for $15 million).
